Working Groups

Working groups are joint activities in DARIAH. They are self-organised and work that is defined by DARIAH's Virtual Competence Centers.

Their activities are complementary to individual contributions from DARIAH member groups always have a certain purpose: They lead to services for the community, scholarly, technical, editorial or organisational. This means, they contribute to extending the DARIAH infrastructure.

Master's Programme in Digital Humanities, 120 higher education credits

We are in the midst of a digital revolution. New technologies mean new opportunities – but they also demand that we try to understand the roles of both humans and the technologies in the digital world. This is what experts in the humanities are good at. Get a degree in Digital Humanities and become part of shaping the future!

The Master’s programme in Digital Humanities falls at the intersection of digital technologies and the central domains of the humanities. The programme enables you to explore both themes and issues in the humanities as well as digital technology in relation to contemporary society, culture and research.

You receive training in computer-aided research methods and digitisation of texts and images. These skills can be applied for example when making cultural heritage material digitally accessible, at the same time as you will have the critical competence needed to ask the important questions.

Thus, the field of Digital Humanities concerns the investigation of themes in
